TERSELY TOLD.

A. McGowan, Jr., of Brewton, is among the business visitors in the city who are registered at the Meridien.

S. R. Blanton, of Eufaula, Ala., was among the arrivals in Pensacola yesterday. He is registered at the Esplanade.

Judge Benj. S. Liden, who has been appointed to arrange for the evidence and witnesses in the Swaine impeachment trial, is in Pensacola, having come here for that purpose.

John Sharp, of Bainbridge, who owns a number of river steamers, and who is also connected with the Oceanic Navigation Co., of this city, reached here yesterday afternoon, being on business connected with his interests.

One of the many worries connected with the position of turnkey at the police station is caused by persons in all portions of the city calling up over the phone and asking the time of day and night. Yesterday afternoon within a space of twenty minutes five or six such calls were answered over the phone, and that too, at a time when the turnkey was busy with other matters. While the turnkey always answers all questions in a most respectful manner telling persons the time of day is becoming somewhat monotonous.

Adaptable Woman.

It is always a mystery how we change our figures, our faces and our gait with every change of fashion, but there is no denying the fact that women do seem to accommodate themselves to Madame La Mode in this way. One year they will be of the drooping, languid, Rossetti type; another, they will be completely Georgian in face and style, and then, hey presto, fashion waves her wand and every one is suddenly transformed into a sturdy, square shouldered, across country look-a-person, with a face to match and a corresponding air.—London World.

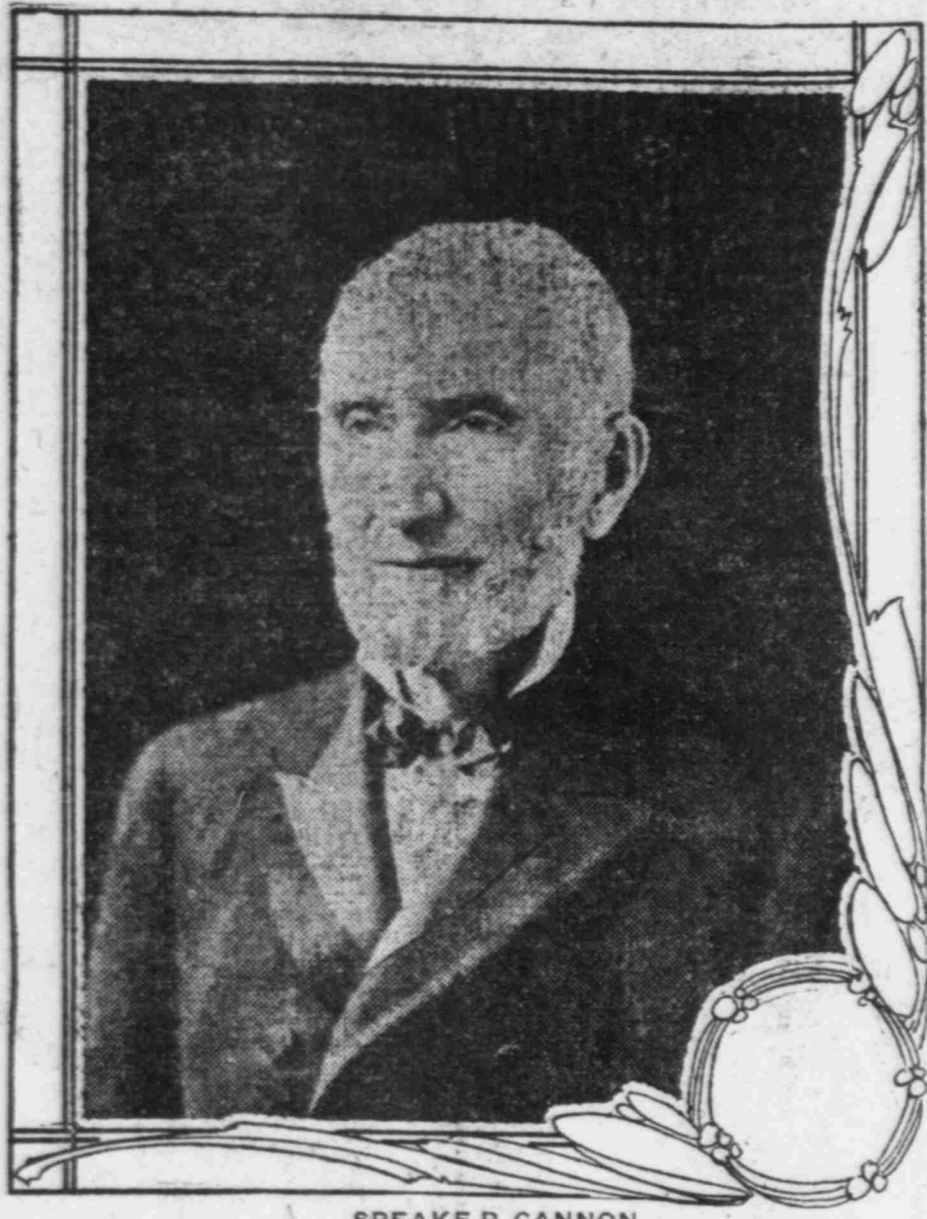

Don't Let the Years Count.

Age will never succeed in retaining a youthful appearance and mentality until people make up their minds not to let the years count, until they cease to make the body old by the constant suggestions of the mind.—Success Magazine.

Fatal Curiosity.

Mrs. Grimes—You lost $50 because of your curiosity? Really, I don't see how you could do that. Mr. Grimes—Nevertheless it is true. I asked the man who sat on the other side of the table what cards he had in his hand.—Boston Transcript.

Discouraged in Almsgiving.

"I suppose," said the plain person, "you are often deceived by apparently deserving objects of charity whom you quietly help."

"Yes, indeed," replied the great philanthropist. "It's just like throwing money away. The very people you think will advertise you most never say a word about it."—Catholic Standard and Times.

P. K. YONGE TALKS
ON CANE GROWING

HE WAS ONE OF WEST FLORIDA'S REPRESENTATIVES AT CANE GROWERS' CONVENTION IN MONTGOMERY.

P. K. Yonge, manager of the Southern States Lumber Co., whose expertment farm at Mucogee has attracted so much attention, returned last week from the convention of the Sugar Cane Growers' Association at Montgomery which he attended. Mr. Yonge speaks in enthusiastic terms of the work which the convention accomplished and of the good which he expects will result from its deliberations.

"A gratifying feature of the convention," said Mr. Yonge, "lay in the fact that West Florida was represented by twelve men who are interested in cane growing and who were able to gather some very valuable information."

"I was particularly interested," continued Mr. Yonge, "in the address of Dr. J. C. Stubbs, of New Orleans, who is a recognized authority on cane growing and on the soils and fertilizers which produce the best results. Dr. Stubbs stated that the cost of raising cane in Louisiana was from $2.00 to $4.00 per ton. As it costs only from $1.50 to $2.50 per ton to raise cane in Florida, and as Florida cane contains a larger percentage of saccharine properties from 20 to 25 per cent more than does Louisiana cane, the advantage which the Florida cane grower possesses is at once apparent."

"I also learned the interesting fact that the Louisiana Experiment Station has for several years been experimenting with sugar cane, for the purpose of improving or finding a better variety. They have succeeded in getting a variety called D 74, or Demerara 74, which in a recent experiment showed 20 per cent increase in tonnage, 43 per cent increase in sugar and 43 per cent increase in the amount realized over the old Louisiana cane."

"In my opinion the most important action of the convention was in endorsing the proposition of the Secretary of Agriculture to establish a standard by which all syrups shall be graded as to thin color and consistency. The most serious drawback in the marketing of syrups has been the want of uniformity in color and quality and the fixing of this standard will to a large extent remove this difficulty and materially aid the syrup maker in disposing of his crop."

Mr. Yonge thinks that West Florida should go into the business of cane growing on an extensive scale. There is money in it for every man who will give the business his energy and attention.

In the life of John Bunyan by W. Hale White the author of "Pilgrim's Progress" is described as follows: "He appeared in countenance to be a stern and rough temper, but in conversation mild and affable, not given to loquacity or much discourse in company unless some urgent occasion required it. He never boasted of himself or his parts. He abhorred lying and swearing, being just in all that lay in his power to his word, not seeming to revenge injuries, loving to reconcile differences and make friendship with all. He had a sharp, quick eye, accompanied with an excellent discerning of persons, being of good judgment and quick wit. As for his person, he was tall of stature, strong boned, though not corpulent, somewhat of a ruddy face, with sparkling eyes, wearing his hair on his upper lip after the old British fashion, his hair reddish, but in his latter days time had sprinkled it with gray. His nose was well set, but not declining or bending, and his mouth moderately large, his forehead something high and his habit always plain and modest."

A STARTLING
REPORT MADE

SUPPOSED THAT A CHILD WAS BEING MURDERED, AND BODY IS SEARCHED FOR

A startling report reached the police station shortly after 1 o'clock this morning when a telephone message from Thos. Williams, stated that a man was murdering a child in the open street, near the corner of De Villier and Garden streets. Captain Fondella and several officers immediately went to the scene in the patrol wagon, and although they found tracks in the soft sand near what is known as the "Big Ditch," no evidence of blood could be discovered.

Williams was on his way home, accompanied by a negro. When he reached a spot near the corner he heard a woman remonstrating and begging some man not to kill the child. A blow was then heard, accompanied by the scream of a child. The woman, it is stated, then told the man that he might just as well finish the job since he had started. The man said "Yes, and you will be next."

Williams did not stop, he said, to listen further, but went to the home of Chas. Johnson and telephoned to the police station.

A thorough search was not only made of the spot where the tracks were found, but the ditch was searched for over a block, the officers thinking that perhaps the body had been thrown into the it.

Williams could not say whether the people were white or colored.

When Animals Go Bad.

An animal trainer says that "no man living knows all about animals or more than a very little about them. Some who are dead thought they knew. That is the reason they are dead. Only those who realize their ignorance and supplement it with untiring watchfulness last long at this queer business that I'm in."

"Sooner or later most animals of the cat kind become utterly intractable and remain so. 'Going bad' is the professional term for this. Rarely do they return to their old amenable ways. Henceforth they are of no use as performers and are relegated to the exhibition cages, for any man entering the cage of a lion or tiger that has gone bad is instantly attacked. This is one of the terrors of the trade. Symptoms of the change of heart are apparent enough sometimes, particularly in animals which are growing old. Occasionally, however, some young beast, formerly as obedient as you could wish, will turn murderous without cause or warning. If her trainer gets out alive he is lucky. If he ever enters her cage again he's a fool."—McClure's.

The Noisy Birds of the Night.

All the night birds are noisy. They cannot consort with one another in happy companies, as do the warblers and thrushes and finches, and sing and whisper, but must call loudly and long to one another in the darkness. On coasts where petrels and certain other night hunting sea birds abound, all day sitting on their eggs or hiding in burrows, you will hear no sound from morning till night, but after dark the air is filled with shrill cries. The loud, reiterated calling of the southern chuck-will's-widow and of its northern cousin is familiar. A whippoorwill will sound its cry several hundred times in succession without a pause. Owls hoot or utter a harsh sort of laughter, rarely pleasant to listen to, and night herons and bitterns squawk and boom. Sweet songs occasionally heard in the darkness are those of wakeful day birds, as the nightingale or our own oven bird.—Ernest Ingersoll in Harper's Magazine.

Today our great cities show proportionately a higher average of dress and general striving after personal attractiveness among both men and women than the great cities of any other country.

Success depends in the largest measure upon health and the personal impression one makes upon his fellow men, and properly to develop and to maintain the "points" that make for personal attractiveness is to develop and maintain health.

For example, how many men and women stop drinking and overeating because fat is fatal to good looks? The struggle to keep looking young is a struggle to keep in perfect health. And what a blessing that is to the present and all future generations!

The price of good looks is right living, and the reward of right living is health.—Saturday Evening Post.

Carlyle's Courtious Side.

In the "Retrospects" of Professor William Knight of the University of St. Andrews are some interesting anecdotes. Among these is a bit from a letter by Dr. Macgilligan, who attended Thomas Carlyle during Carlyle's last years: "My personal experience of Carlyle was this: He was the most courteous man I ever met. Never once did that old man fail to rise up to receive me nor allow me to leave his room without walking to the door with me while he had strength to do so. After death all the ruggedness and the wrinkles disappeared from his face. But for the beard it was like that of a woman, so delicate and beautifully molded it was."

Red and Green Snow.

At various times it is recorded that there has been "blood on the face of the moon." Some old chronicles tell of showers of blood, which, however, are not well authenticated. The "bloody snow" on the other hand, is an actual thing. Snow is sometimes found in polar and Alpine regions, where it lies unmelted from year to year, and the annual fall is small, colored red by the presence of innumerable small red plants. In its native state the plant consists of brilliant red globules on a gelatinous mass. Red snow was observed by the ancients, a passage in Aristotle referring to it, but it attracted little or no attention until 1700, when Sansure observed it in the Alps and concluded that it was due to the pollen of a plant. It was also noticed by the arctic expedition under Captain Ross on Baffin's bay shore, on a range of cliffs, the red color penetrating to the depth of twelve feet. Less frequent is a green growth of snow.

Just imagine these rich colors decorating the landscape near our large cities! Country house parties would have a new attraction which would appeal to the artistic and aesthetic sense.

Reformed.

Mrs. Dearborn—Do you believe in marrying a man to reform him? Mrs. Wabash—Sure! I married my first husband to reform him. "What was wrong with him?" "He was a bachelor." "Oh, I see how you reformed him." "Not only that; I understand he's had three other wives since I left him."—Yonkers Statesman.

A Young Critic.

"Papa," said the pastor's little girl, watching him constructing and revising his Sunday sermon, "does God tell you what to write?" "Yes, my child, God tells me." "Then what do you scratch it out for?"

Revenge.

Witherby—I say, did you recommend that cook of ours to my wife? Plankington—Yes, I believe so. Witherby—Well, I wish you would come round tonight and take dinner with us.
